AMTRAK BRINGS YOU MORE BICENTENNIAL FOR LESS MONEY.

Amtrak's new round-trip Colonial Corridor Excursion Ticket enables you to buy a coach ticket at any Amtrak station in the Colonial Corridor and visit Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C. — cities where many of the Bicentennial festivities will be concentrated.

The special price: $40 round-trip for adults . . . $20 for children 2 through 11. (Children under 2 usually ride free.) A saving of more than 30% from regular round-trip coach fares. If you prefer, Amtrak also offers a special one way Colonial Corridor coach fare between Boston and Washington at $25 for adults . . . $12.50 for children. But for just a few dollars more doesn't it pay to enjoy an Amtrak round-trip?

HOW THE COLONIAL CORRIDOR TICKET WORKS:

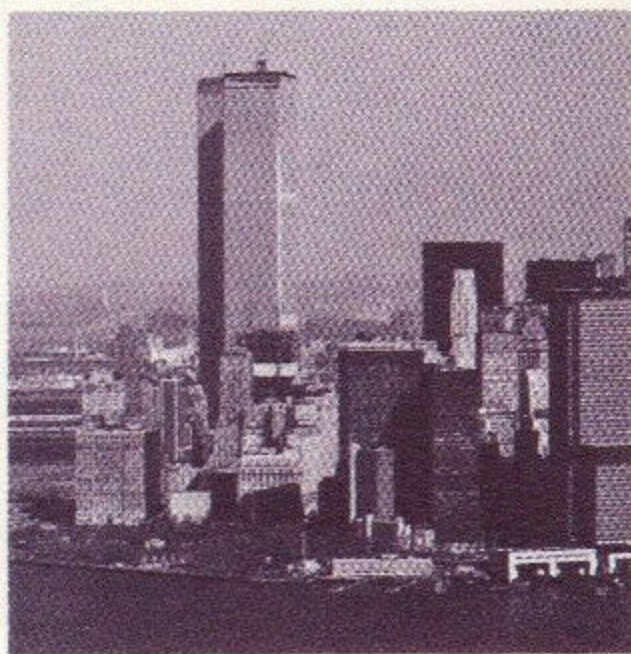

Starting at any one of the four major stations, you are entitled to stop at one intermediate city between Boston and New York . . . one between New York and Philadelphia and one between Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. Intermediate stopover cities must be the same in each direction of travel. If you start your trip on the train between any two of the four major stations, your stopover privileges are the same, except your starting point replaces the intermediate stopover city between those two major stations.

Use your Amtrak Colonial Corridor Ticket to visit Boston. Take a free walking tour along Freedom Trail. Ride a convenient commuter train to Minute Man National Historical Park between Concord and Lexington where "the embattled farmers fired the shot heard around the world." Amtrak offers a dozen trains to Boston. Many Boston and Maine RR commuter trains link up with Concord. Their off-peak round-trip fare between Boston and Concord is $1.70.

Visit New York and take the famous Culture Bus Loops I and II. Busses run every 20 minutes and make many fascinating stops along historic trails and to cultural spots. You get off at the stops you choose, then catch another bus, or stay on for the entire trip. You'll visit Federal Hall (Washington's inauguration), Fraunces Tavern and South Street Seaport Museum. (All for one dollar per person.)

In Philadelphia, visit Independence National Historic Park where the Declaration of Independence was signed, and see the original Liberty Bell. A sight and light show tells the whole inspiring story. Amtrak trains offer frequent service to Philadelphia, and a rapid transit line links the historic area with the Amtrak 30th Street Station. For something different in parks, visit Washington's Wolf Trap Farm Park for the performing arts in the nearby Virginia suburbs. See and hear the Bicentennial celebrated in music and dance. Take one of many Amtrak trains to Washington and a Metro bus on to beautiful Wolf Trap. Amtrak's Washington terminal is located within walking distance of Capitol Hill.

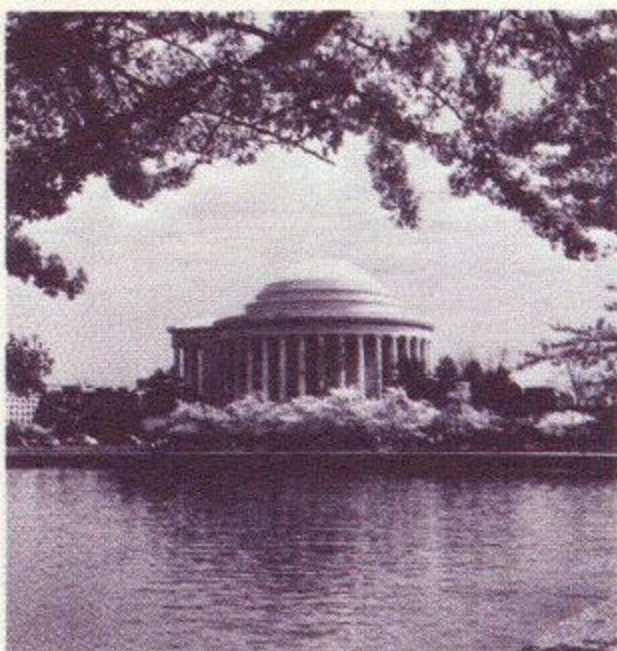

MORE COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE

Amtrak's flexible new excursion package makes traveling to the Bicentennial cities more relaxing, more comfortable, more convenient — at a price that's never before been available. And you get more for that price than ever before. A whole "Amfleet" of brand new passenger cars, featuring plush reclining seats, better-than-ever-ride quality, taped music, and spacious, congenial surroundings.

In addition, the new Amcafe car serves tempting snacks and refreshments at refreshingly moderate prices and service is courteous and prompt all the way. What's more, Amtrak's convenient, frequent Colonial Corridor schedules help you roll from city to city smoothly and swiftly — avoiding extra heavy tourist auto traffic to and from the key cities. Step aboard, it's easy come — easy go — and a pleasure while you're getting there.
